

Reflect and discuss

Social determinants of health

Social determinants of health (SDOHs) are the non-medical factors that influence our health. These include our living conditions, the learning and work opportunities available to us, and social norms. Research suggests SDOHs are more important than health care or lifestyle choices. Some studies say SDOHs account for 30-55% of health outcomes. People who live in poorer areas tend to have poorer health.

Activity steps

1. Consider the factors below that influence health equity, the chance to be as healthy as possible.
2. Choose a person, community or country to examine through the SDOH lens.
3. Fill in the chart with examples that reflect the realities and opportunities (or lack of opportunities) available to the person or community.
4. Share your findings and how you feel about them with others.

Income and social protection

Education

Working life conditions

Food insecurity

Reflect and discuss

Social determinants of health

Structural conflict

Access to affordable health services of decent quality

Unemployment and job insecurity

Housing, basic amenities and the environment

Early childhood development

Social inclusion and non-discrimination